Food Recovery
The County of Riverside has launched “Waste Not Rlv Co” to support businesses that can donate food to help their community. Feeding hungry people with donations of extra food is an integral part of resource conservation. Organizations served by food rescue and food bank programs include community centers, soup kitchens, food pantries, homeless shelters, senior programs, and childcare centers. The following website https://www.rivcoeh.org/OurServices/Foods/ FoodDonations will support a business with documents, locations, and resources for a safe food recovery program.

The US EPA’s Food Recovery Hierarchy ranks food donations to feed hungry people as a top priority to help reduce wasted food. The top levels of the hierarchy are the best ways to prevent waste and bring the most benefits to the environment.
